Man charged in insurance fraud

Democrat and Chronicle

(April 3, 2002) — A Greece man has been arrested on a charge of insurance fraud.

The state Insurance Department announced Tuesday that Kevin Palmer, 25, is to appear in Henrietta Town Court on April 11. If convicted, he could face up to seven years in prison.

Palmer was arrested March 28, according to State Police Investigator Steve Kelley of the auto theft unit in Rochester. Palmer is free on his own recognizance.

The Insurance Department said Palmer, 25, reported his vehicle stolen in December and submitted a claim to Progressive Insurance Co., Henrietta. In January, the company paid Palmer $25,185 to settle the claim. However, investigators say Palmer recovered the vehicle shortly after the theft and didn't tell anyone at the insurance company.

A state press release said Palmer is a Rochester teacher. A spokeswoman for the City School District said Tuesday that a teacher by that name works for the district, but she could not confirm it was the same person.
